PROSPEROUS NEWPORT.

THE SOCIAL SEASON OPENING WELL,

GOSSIP ABOUT SUMMER RESIDENTS AND THEIR DOINGS. Newport, July 14 (Special).-The weather has been

Newport, July 14 (Special).—The weather has been quite cool here this week, but the city, thanks to the summer meeting of the American Institute of Instruction, has prospered. The hotels and private boarding-houses received many guests, and everybody appears to be satisfied with the week's business. The Casino dances were started with a very small attendance, but it is fair to nresume that the visitors will be on hand in larger numbers when the season is further advanced. The school teachers were handsomely entertained, and they are loud in their praises of the very enjoyable programme prepared by the local committee.

The society swells have decided to chase the anise bar rather than the fox during the season, and the hounds are expected early next week.

The cottagers and others who have occasion to drive out are finding considerable fault because the fashienable theroughfares are so poorly watered. The city voted a sufficient sum of money for the proper watering of all the principal streets, especially Bellevue-ave and the famous Ocean drive, but for some reason, known probably to the city officials, the watering-carts are not ordered out as often as they should be, and as a result clouds of dust and dirt are encountered. Newport dust is ruinous to fine dresses, and the ladies have positively refused to ride until the dust is properly laid. The cottagers are indignant and they have taken all the means in their power to bring the matter to the attention of the proper authorities. The suppose positions are a cottaged to Newport.

to bring the matter to the attention of the proper authorities. The summer residents are a god-send to Newport, but they propose getting square with samebody. They certainly have the power and the influence to make the local residents feel that they have certain rights which they should respect. The cettagers do not grumble at the taxes and other expenses entailed here, and they argue that the amount they pay in taxes, etc., should entitle them to the privilege of utilizing the beautiful drives on which Newmer's in famous without being smothered for which Newport is famous, without being smothered with dust. Mayor Powel is now taking an interest in the matter, and he will see what can be done to remedy Among those who have taken rooms at the Ocean

CAPE MAY NOTES.

Cape May, N. J., July 14 (Special).-It has not been cape May, N. J., July 1s (Special).—It has not been so lively here this week as last, but the number of permanent visitors has increased. The Cape May City Athletic Club was to have had a big meeting here this week, but the bad weather prohibited the carrying out of almost the whole programme. The Manhattan Ath-letic Club was represented here by Copeland, who stands the first of American sprint rs. Then Babcock of the New-York Athletic Club, was among the amateur-present. New-York had a large delegation, and Phila desphia and Baltimore sent their amateur all-round ath-letes. Among the pole vaulter entries were Hugh H. Baxter, of Vermont, who holds a record of 11 ft. 5 in.

The Cape May Driving Park meetings will take place en July 28, 31, August 2, 4, 7, 9 and 11, 1888. Twelve runners from C. M. Ackerman's stables, Columbus, Ohio, have arrived, and more are on the way from different parts of the country. B. R. Sheriff, secretary of the Cape May Association, has had charge of the Sheepslead Bay Driving Park, and built the Monmouth Park Racecourse. The mile track is a particularly fine one and is not excelled by any park in the country.

Among the arrivals from New-York are: Alexander T. Trent. Frank Adams, James W. Nagles, Th. mas Bellly, the Rev. M. J. Reinhart, P. J. Wells, John H. Albert, Joseph Fenjamin Levy, A. McGert, John H. Abell, Mrs. Burd Grubb and daughters, J. Q. A. Hal

THE WEATHER KEEPS THE VISITORS AWAY-A NEW CLUB-HOUSE-PROMINENT ARRIVALS. Cettage City, Mass., July 14 (Special)-Long continue cold weather has interfered considerably with the calculation of the is and reas to the advent of large numbers of summe visitors. The season is backward, and there are not m than two-thirds as many people here as at this time last year. Most of the cottagers have arrived, however. The hotels are all open, but few guests have come. The Martha's Vineyard Club is doing great work here this season, and deserves much credit for its efforts to amuse and entertain the summer visitors. It is through the efforts of this club that so many improvements have been made, and so many charming entertainments given. An interesting and desirable feature has been added to the attractions of the Vineyard since last season, in the shape of a gentlemen's club-house. The site selected for the club was that occupied by the elegant Barnes villa on Sca View-ave. The villa was leased for a term of years, and having been refitted and refurnished, makes a handsome club-house.

Most of those whose names adorn the club's books are the solid, substantial residents of the place. Among the prominent members are Commodore Elbridge T.

As a consequence, nearly everybody, oil and young, who remains here for any length of time, learns to swim, and some of the most expert swimmers are among the lady bathers.

A BRIDGE WITHOUT A PUBLIC.

FEW PEOPLE TO BE BENEFITED NOW BY THE

NEWEST SPAN ACROSS THE HARLEM. When the taxpayers of this city are called upon to pay out two and a half million dollars they naturally ask who is going to be benefited by it? Since the Manhattan 12-idge over the Harlem river from Washington Heights at One-hundred-and-eighty-first st. was first projected, this question has been asked by The Tribune more than once. The bridge is now nearly completed; and probably the most satisfactory manner in which to answer the question is to glance at the bridge and its environments. That the bridge itself will be a source of pride to the city as well as to the men that built it, is not to be Yesterday, after having viewed it from several points a reporter climbed to the top of the hill on the eastern side of the river and walked over to Aqueduct-ave., near which is the eastern appreach of the bridge, and where he was just out of ear shot of the hammering of the workmen riveting the iron work. Not a person was in sight nor was there a sound to be heard. To the south, over the brow of the hill a glimpse of High Bridge was obtained and beyond in the smoky distance was the busy city. To the east the view was obstructed by a range of hills. To the north the beautiful grounds of the William B. Ogden estate made a refreshing picture.

The reporter started north along Aqueduct-ave. when opposite the house on the Ogden estate a mail collector was seen. A little further on was a telegraph fire alarm box. About a quarter of a mile from the bridge the avenue turns to the east and a few near the second turn several houses are being built on the Marshall estate; and this is the only building being done in the vicinity. All of the land immediately around the eastern approach to the bridge belongs to the Ogden estate, which is several hundred acres in extent, including the settlement at the High Bridge station of the New-York Central Railcoad. The merchants at High Bridge say that the price asked for the land by the executor is so high as to be practically a refusal to sell. The Montgomery estate lies next worth, and a number of large estates occupy the land as far up as Fordham.

convenient distance from the bridge; in fact, there is a large tract of billy land used for gardening and farming purposes, on which the streets have not been laid out, and there is no means of approaching the bridge from that direction. The bridge has undoubtedly enhanced the value of all of these large estates; but concerning its practical utility it would seem, from a careful survey of the situation, that fullness rather than fill an existing want. It cannot be said that it affords a quicker means of getting down-town from the east side of the Harlem River than now exists. As a matter of fact it does not. Some time in the future when that part of the Twen ty-third Ward becomes thickly populated it undoubtedly will be found useful as well as ornamental; but during the lifetime of men now living it will proba-bly remain ornamental only.

Among the passengers who arrived on the Guion Line steamer Arizona on Monday last was John Jodrell, who since landing was discovered to be insure. On leaving Castle Garden he went to beard at Hamilon's Hotel, in Frontist., where he remained until it was discovered that his actions were not those of a same person, when he was kept under close surveillance. On Friday evening he managed to escape his watchers, and got away from the house. A search was made and he was found in a liquor store and was immediately handed over to the Castle Garden officials. On being searched, $165 and a draft for $45 were found in his possession. He will

THE TRIBUNE'S GIFT TO THEIR DUANE ST. LODG-ING HOUSE THOROUGHLY APPRECIATED "Ah there, Kiddy! can yer row?"
"Row! Naw; never had der chance."

"Come over to der lodgin' den and learn on de Tribune's machines; cricky, but dere fly!" and the two street arabs hurried away to the Newsboys' Lodging House, at Duane and New-Chambers sts., to stretch their arms and backs and strengthen their muscle on the eight new rowing machines, presented and erected in the gymnasium there by The Tribune. As they dash up the broad stone stairway of the big five-story home they pass the open door of a fine light reception-room, where a number of boys like themselves are sitting about in careless attitudes, singing a chorus led by one of the assistants, on a piano. Up another flight and they halt a second to peep into a big dining-room where long tables, lined with white, big, generous looking bowls stand ready for the coming meal. Up another story, and two big dormitory doors stand ajar, revealing long rows of narrow, iron bedsteads, with white sheets and red coverlets turned down for the weary little "gutter-snipes" that occupy them nightly. Up one more flight, and they dash into the big room set apart for the boys' fun, frolic and physical development.

Here the first gloom of disappointment settles on the brow of "Kiddy" and his conductor. True, there are the eight Tribune rowing machines ranged along one side of the wall, shining in new paint, yet unsoiled by usage, but then every one of them has a boy before it working away for dear life, and the long line of "nexts" in walting shows that the rowing lesson cannot take place just at once. So they turn their attention to the other apparatus, having first filed their claim for a turn at one of the two double machines, next in order after Sandy McGee, who is only four boys off from the present manipulator, whose perspiring brow, bulging eyes and heaving chest are closely marked and halled as infallfile signs that he cannot hold out, in the ordinary course of nature, much longer.

A LAME BOY WHO CAN FLY A LITTLE. Look at that lame boy as he hobbles across the floor. What does he want with his shrivelled legs in a gymnastum? He has stopped just under the trapeze. Poor lad, how he must grieve to be forever debarred from flying through the air on that dainty swing. Now he is elevating his crutch and has caught the trapeze bar with the handle of that support. There! he has dropped the other crutch and now, gractous! he has climbed hand over hand up his own crutch in a jiffy and is perched on the trapeze bar with an agility only surpassed by Mr. Crowley. of Central Park. And there he swings, gyrates and cavorts for half an hour in a manner which proves that no matter how useless his lower limbs are, from the waist up his muscles are like whipcord.

This lodging house has accommodations for the bed and board of 800 boys, and it is generally full on winter nights, though many of the lads prefer to sleep in the parks and out-of-the-way places in warm weather. Eighteen cents pays for supper, bread and breakfast, five cents for one of the ordinary beds alone and a dime for a cot among what the boys call the "Upper Tea," a dormitory which boasts some enament on the walls, a locker at the head of each bed, and crimson curtains on walnut bars that lend a privacy to the sleeper he cannot get in the big bedroom. Formerly the management washed the boys' shirts for them, but dividing the clean garment's among the claimants caused too much quarrelling, lying and stealing, and it was abandoned. Every encouragement is given to the boys to save their money. Begular bank accounts are kept with the depositors and ment is given to the loss to save their more large bank accounts are kept with the depositors and interest paid mouthly. Many of them make a good deal of money, between 83 and 84 a day, and some make harely enough to pay their way into the lodging house. Nearly all of them, however, spend it freely and wastefully on cheap theatres and various forms of boyish gambling, such as pitching pennies, etc., etc., vice. HOW SOME OF THEM PROSPER.
One of the boys, "Foxy Fred" or Fred Fox, ago

fourteen, has $600 to his credit. He hires six or seven smaller fellows to sell papers for him, allow ing them a small commission for their services. will soon set up a news-stand somewhere and will will soon set up a news-stand somewhere and will doubtless be successful, for with all his shrewdness and saving ways he retains the regard and best wishes of his fellows. They lend to one another freely and are surprisingly honest in the matter of paying these debts. Their manners are fairly good when in the home; hats are removed and order is preserved, no matter how badly they may set on the streets. A night school is well attended during the winter months, and every effort is made to reclaim those who show any disposition to do better and secure them homes in the West. The most difficult ones to do anything for are the big boys. There seems to be no place in the world for them. They have grown up without any training but that in street trades. The trades unions have kept them from being apprenticed, and they are soon too big to sell papers on the street, for the little boys beat them at it. For these farm life in the West or South seems the only method of elevation and salvation from the yawning pit into which idle and hungry boys in a great city almost invariably fall.

There are altogether too many of these semi-vagrant

There are altogether too many of these semi-vagrant children in the streets who grow up without "schooling." Truants are compelled to attend school, as a rule, but many slip through from the fact that the law makes an exception of such children as have a "lawful occupation" in the streets. The Italian street children soon discover this and set the law at defiance, so that bands of little Italian bootblacks and newsboys may be seen during school hours in uptown and downtown wards, pitching pennies and otherwise amusing themselves under the guise of "street occupation. To this class the lodging house offers just what they most need, and many of them have been sent West by the Children's Aid Society, by which the lodging house is conducted. One of these, William R. Moore, of whom nothing had been heard for years, wrote from Frankfort, Ind., last year, for so much of his pedigree as the records of the house might show, for use in his application to the President for appointment as United States District-Attorney for his state; and another rose to be Mayor of Chippewa Falls, Wis., and a member of the Legislature there.
